The mind that wraps itself in grief And vents its woes in groaning. Would never gain one hour's relief, For ages pass'd in mouning.

Look always on the sunny side-The sun is ever shiping; The shadow may be dark and wide, But 'tis no use repining.

Nay, tho' the sun seem vanish'd quite, We are not unenlightened. The glittering stars show best at night, As though by darkness brightened.

Your path may be thro' deserts drear, But springs e'en there are flowing; Keep up your spirits, never fear, Heaven still is joy bestowing.

As a bright flower that may be found Where all besides is dreary, Scems to shed sweeter fragrance around, In comfort to the weary.

Just so, a joy the mourner sees Am I the gloom of sorrow, Possesses double power to please, And strengthens for the morrow.

Then let us always look for joy, E'en in our griefs invite her: And what would otherwise annoy, Will help to make life brighter, PRIVATE PUDDING; OR HOW THE HOOSIER COME IT.

Many years ago a Hoosier, who had just struck New Orleans for the first time, after his flatboat was made snug and fast, went up to see the sights of the city. Passing St. Charles he stopped immediately in front of the St. Charles Hotel, and, looking up seemed to scrutinize the building with the eye of an architectural con-

After satisfying his gaze he asked of a passer-by what building it was; on being told it was a hotel, he enquired for the entrance, and being shown, he ascended the steep steps. Approaching the office, he enquired for the landlord, of whom he ne enquired for the landlord, of whom he enquired if he could get 'a bite' to eat. Mr. E. R. Mudge, who was the host at that time, and who is a host at all times, humoring the fellow, told him he could do so by paying a dollar. After considering for some time on this item, and gravely looking his host in the fees he gravely looking his host in the face, he whar's your dinner?'

Well, I'll go it-thar's your dollar,

'Well,' said the other, with a smile, 'it is not ready yet, but take a seat at the table there, and you can amuse yourself with the papers for half an hour, when you will hear the gong, which will inform you that dinner is ready. 'The gong, what's that?' asked the

'Oh you will find out when you hear it,' replied Mudge.

Satisfied with this answer, the Hoosier, after looking wildly around him, sat down and rummaged over the papers. Time speed on at its customary rate, when sud-denly the gong sounded, and as usual the crowd moved for the dining room.

seat, but being met by the host he was conducted to his allotted chair. The gentlemen seated on each side of him, as well as the gentleman opposite him, had their wine before them.

After finishing his soup, and having his plate well filled, the Hoosier observed the gentlemen helping themselves freely to wine, and so, seizing the bottle of his right hand neighbor, he attempted to help himself, when he was modestly informed that the wine was 'private.'
The Hoosier did not seem to comprehend, and with a blank sort of look resumed his knife and fork. On laying them down again, and having apparently come to the conclusion that it could not all be 'private' wine, he seized hold of his left hand friend's bottle.

'S' p, if you please, sir,' said the off-ended individual with a fierce look, 'that is private wine, sir.'

The Hoosier looked still more astonished, and finding it a hard case, thought he ed, and finding it a hard case, thought he would make another trial any how. So reaching across the table, he seized the bottle opposite to him, and was just in the act of filling his glass, when his vis-a-vis re-echoed 'private wine, sir, if you please,' and withdrew the bottle from the fearful and withdrew the bottle from the fearful leakage it was about to undergo.

The 'green 'un,' becoming enraged at being foiled on every side, and observing that there was a general simpering and tittering among the waiters, turned on the servant who stood at the back of the chair, and who had taken away his plate for the fifth or sixth time, and cried out to him with an oath to bring back his plate, and that if he took it away again, 'he'd be dod-rod if he didn't draw his picker on him,' and, as suiting the action showing the handle of a huge bowie knife.

After this, things went on quietly, till the desert was put on the table, when a large dish of 'Charlotte Russe' was set large dish of 'Charlotte Russe' was set right before the Hoosier. This he imme-diately drew near his plate, and looking right and left at his neighbors, he helped himself to a large portion of it. Keeping his eyes fixed on the dish, while eating he perceived his right hand neighbor at-tempting to withdraw the dish from him tempting to withdraw the dish from him.

'No you don't mister, said the Hoosier to him, 'that thar puddin' is private pud-

The left hand gentleman, not observing what had passed, there said—

'Allow me to take this pudding, sir?'
'No, you can't take that thar puddin',' said the Hoosier with a scowl, 'that's pri-"Sie puddin',' and he re-helped himself.
Shortly after, the gentleman opposite was in the act of drawing the dish over

'Hold on, mister,' said the Hoosier, with a look of triumph, 'I'd have you to know that that puddin' is private puddin',' while at the same time he put his thumb to his nose and made sundry gyrations with his fingers. 'You can't come it over me,' he continued, feeling that a joke had been practised upon him. 'Private wine,

The attention of the table being attracted during the latter scene, the gentlemen around burst into a roar of laughter, and soon the whole story was whispered from one to another. The thing took so well that every gentleman was induced to send his bottle to the Hoosier with his compliments, and our 'green'un' soon be-came as merry as a lord. Hiccoughing as he left the table, he turned round to the gentlemen and said:
'Well, old (hie) fellows, you (hie) couldn't (hie) come it over (hie) me with your (hie) private wine.'

The glasses fairly danced upon the ta ble with the uproar and laughter which this last remark created, and the Hoosier staggering out of the room made the best of his way to his boat.—N. O. Pic.

REFORMATION OF WM. WIRT.

The distinguished William Wirt, within six or eight months after his first marriage became addicted to intemperance, the effect of which operated strengly on the mind and health of his wife, and in a few months more, she was numbered few months more, she was numbered with the dead. Her death led him to leave 'he country where he resided, and he moved to Richmond, where he soon rose to distinction. But his habits hung about him, and occasionally he was found with jolly and frolicsome spirits in bacchanalian reverlo. His true friends ex-postulated with him, to convince him of the injury he was doing himself. But he still persisted.—His practice began to fall off, and many looked on him as on the sure road to ruin. He was advised to get married, with a view of correcting his habits. This he consented to do if the right person offered. He accordingly paid his address to a Miss Gamble. After some month's attention, he asked her hand in marriage, she replied—"Mr. Wirt, I have been well aware of your intentions for some time back, and should have given your tentions." have given you to understand that your visits and attentions were not acceptable, had I not reciprocated the affection which you evinced for me. But I cannot yield speed on at its customary rate, when suddenly the gong sounded, and as usual the crowd moved for the dining room.

Recovering from his astonishment at the noise of the gong, and scattering the delicious fumes of the dinner, the Hoosier made a rush through the crowd for a seat, but being met by the host, he was to him was the same as ever-his, resentment and neglect. In the course of a few weeks he went again, and again solicited her hand. But her reply was, her mind was made up. He became indig-nant, and regarded the terms she proposnant, and regarded the terms she proposed as insulting to his honor and vowed it should be the last meeting they should have. He took to drinking worse and worse, and seemed to run headlong to ruin. One day, while lying in the outskirts of the city, near a little grocery or grog shop, dead drunk, a young lady whom it is not necessary to name, was pressing that way to her home, not for off passing that way to her home, not far off, and beheld him with his face upturned to the rays of the scorching sun. She took her handkerchief, with her own name marked upon it, and placed it over his face. After he had remained in that way some hours, he was awakened, and his thirst being so great, he went into the little grocery or grog shop to get a drink, when he discovered the handkerchief, at which he looked, and the name was on it. which he looked, and the name was on it. After pausing a few minutes, he exclaimed—"Great God! who left this with me! who placed this on my face?" No one knew. He dropped the glass exclaiming, "enough! enough!" he retired instantly from the store, forgetting his thirst, but not the debaueb, the handkerchief, or the lady, vowing if God gave him strength, never again to touch, taste, or handle, intoxicating drinks.

toxicating drinks. To meet Miss G, again was the hardest effort of his life. If he met her in her carriage, or on foot, he would dodge round the nearest corner. She at last addressed him a note under her own hand, inviting him to her house, which he finally gathered courage enough to accept.

to the word, put his hand into his bosom, He told her if she bore affection for him, he would agree to her own terms. Her reply was: "my conditions are now what they ever have been." "Then," said the disenthralled Wirt, "I accept them."

They were soon married; and from that day he kept his word and h's affairs brightened, while honors and glories gath-ered thick upon his brow. His name has been enrolled high in the temple of fame, while his deeds, his patriotism and renown, live after him with imperishable lustre. How many noble minds might the young ladies save, if they would follow the example of the heroine-hearted Miss G., the friend of humanity, of her country, and the relation of La Fayette .- Temperance Ban-

According to the estimate of the Hon. F. Butler King, says the National Intelligencer, when a Rail Road across the Isthmus is completed, with the aid of steamers of a speed of twelve miles an hour, the voyage from New-York will be completed in the following time:

To Calcutta in - - - - 47 day Canton in - - - - 36 " Shanghae in - - - 35 " Valparaiso in - - - - 17
Callao in - - - - 12
Guayaquil in - - - 9 Penama in - - - - - -San Blas in - - - - 12 Mazatlan in - - - 14 San Diego in - - - 16 San Francisco in - - -

What a commercial revolution is here prefigured! The Isthmus Rail Road will cost, it is said, but a million of dollars to construct it from Panama to the navigable waters of Chagres river. The whole length is 46 miles, summit level 300 feet, curvatures with no radus less than 1,500 feet. No grade will exceed 50 feet to the mile, while for much the greater dis-tance (say 36 miles out of 46) no grade will exceed 20 feet to the mile. Some of the grades on the Boston and Albany Rail Road are 83 feet.

Refuge of a robber in a burial Vault.—The Cork Constitu in contains the following:—"The parish Church of Carrigrohan was broken into last week through the vestry-room, and a window sash, some brass and iron articles, and the hangings of the pulpit were carried off.
On the following day the sextoness was walking through the grave-yard, when her attention was suddanly arrested by two hands which she perceived thrust through a hole in a large vault, and drawing towards them a piece of coffin-board to stop the aperture. Being much alarmed, she went for the police, who returned with her to the spot, and on looking into the vault, they discovered a living tenant comfortably stretched on some grass and straw, strewed over coffinboards and human bones. With a skull so placed as to appear for a pillow. so placed as to answer for a pillow. They instantly summoned the strange tenant of the tomb to 'come out and appear,' which he seemed very loth to do; and it was not untill they threatened to fire at him, that he came out and surrendered. He was a most forbidding looking villain."

DEATH OF CHARLES ALBERT .- The exking of Sardinia has not long survived his abdication. According to the Courier des Etats Unis, he died almost immediately on his arrival in Portugal, June 9th, of an indisposition, which, though regarded as slight at first terminated as slight at first terminated as ded as slight at first, terminated suddenly in death. The English papers make no mention of it.

WORTH REMEMBERING .- He who is passionate and hasty is generally honest. It's your cool, dissembling hypocrite, of whom you should beware. There is no deceit about a bull dog. It's only the cur that sneaks up and bites you when your back is turned. Again, we say, beware of the man who has cant in his looks.

Recognition of the Hungarian Republic by the U. S. Government.—It was men-tioned a few days since that Mr. L. B. Breisach had petitioned the U.S. Government to recognise the Republic of Hungary by the appointment of a diplomatic agent thereto. The New-York Journal of Commerce states that Mr. Breisach has received an answer to his application, and, as it seems, a satisfactory one.—Tele-
